WYOMING.

Wyoming, the 44th state, has an area of 97,883 square miles. It is one of the richest states in the Union in natural wealth-producing resources, and offers many inducements to home-seekers. Within its horders are found not only the precious metals but inexhaustible quantities of coal, oil, iron, asbestos, gypsum, copper, cobalt, soda; in fact, everything, and as yet the state has been but partially prospected. The gold mines are in a state of semi-development, but give promise to become famous producers at no distant day. In the oil districts development work has progressed steadily during the past few years, and it is only a question of time when Wyoming oil will supply in large part the needs of the world.

The possibilities of the state, from an agricultural standpoint, are just beginning to be understood, and farmers driven from other states by droughts and failures of crops are settling in Wyoming in large numbers. With an abundant supply of water for irrigation purposes farming will soon be brought to a state of perfection nuknown in the more eastern states. A number of small agricultural communities have recently sprung into existence. The most notable of these is Wheatland in this county, which, though less than a year old, numbers about 250 families. The Big Horn basin is also attracting a large proportion of these homeseckers and the next year will see half a dozen new villages in that section.

CHEYENNE.

Cheyenne, the capital of the State of Wyoming, has the reputation of being the wealthiest city of its size in United States, and a population of about 11,000.

The Capitol building is a most magnificent structure, built of beautiful grey sandstone, taken from the quarries of the State.

The Public School system equals those of the largest cities in the East,

The Union Pacific R. R. Co, have located shops here at a cost of $1,500,000. When running at full capacity, they employ 2,600 men.

Fort Russell, a United States military post, is situated about four miles northwest of the city, where about 700 protectors of our country are located.

The water supply is said to be the finest in the country.

The business men are enterprising and thrifty, always ready to endorse any enterprise that is of benefit to the State.

EXPLANATION TO STREETS.

The streets of Cheyenne run at right angles with one another. The only break from regularity occurs on Fifteenth between Capitol avenue and Evans, where houses are fronting on what is virtually an alley.

Under the new system of numbering they are as follows: Streets running north and south commence at First street, count 100 numbers to a block, the even numbers on the west side and the odd numbers on the seat side. For instance: the first number is 100 on the west side, and the first number on the east side is 101. Each 22 feet is entitled to a number, therefore the numbers between First and Second streets would be from 100 to 123 inclusive.

The streets running east and west from First to Thirty-second, commencing at the southern limits of the city, are divided by Central avenue (formerly Ransome street). They are numbered with 100 to a block, the even numbers on the north side and the odd on the south side. Those streets east of Central avenue are called east, and those west of Central avenue are called west.

The streets hearing names are thirty in number, and run north and south. Commencing at the western limits of the city they run in the order given below. In using the table the reader will read down the first and then the second column, instead of crosswise.

Stinsen, Warren avenue, McComb, House, Cribbon, Evans, Dey, Van Lennen, Ames. Maxwell, Dillon, Seymour, Snyder, Pebrican. Reed. Russell. Bent, Morrie. O'Neil. Bradley, Thomes, Duff. Eddy, Alexander, Ferguson. Dunn. Capitol avenue, Rollins. Central avenue. Hugur.

Abbreviations used in the Directory are—e, east; w, west; n, north; s, south; cor, corner; bet, between; rms, rooms; r, residence.

THE H. P. HYNDS BUILDING

One of the most striking structures in the business quarter of Cheyenne is the H. P. Hynds Building, which presents its beautiful face from the west side of Ferguson, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. It has some inclination to massiveness in its blocks of native red sandstone reared three stories above the pavement. The exterior is attractive, and inside the finish is rich and the furnishings are simply gorgeous. This building contains H. P. Hyuds' Club rooms and saloon, one of the sights of the city. The proprietor landed in Cheyenne not many years ago without a dollar, and is now pretty well fixed. He is a shrewd business man, enjoys great personal popularity, and is known all over the country as the premier sporting man of Wyoming, and as a gentleman scrupulously fair and honest in all dealings.
